SEN. HILL EXPLAINS.

Special to the Star.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Senator Ben. H. Hill writes a letter to H. M. Watterson explanatory of his action in electing Clerk of the Senate. He says he was pledged to Watterson, but exception was made in case of candidate from his own State; that he, in first place, dissuaded Young from announcing himself till it was shown Watterson could not be elected. Witness concludes: "I never spoke to Burch, or a friend of his, on the subject, and the intimation that I was in collision with Burch against you is simply infamous."

"I regret your defeat, but this attempt to make me the scapegoat is as vile as it is untruthful. The election with the forty present, without your greatest possibility, I do not know the author of that dispatch. Senator Butler will confirm all I say."

THE GREENBACKS ARE GREATLY CHAGRINED at the action of the House last Saturday in adjourning over until Tuesday. The morning hour on Monday is the only time in the week when bills can be introduced without unanimous consent. The Greenbackers had prepared a score or more of bills to relieve all the ills that impend upon the country, and calculated to get them before the House to-day. The majority for an adjournment until Tuesday was so great that sufficient votes to order the yeas and nays on the question of adjournment could not be obtained. The action of the House in the matter indicates the presence of a very large majority opposed to any general legislation outside of the appropriation bills at the extraordinary session.

An apt illustration of the manner in which the President is regarded by members of the Republican party is afforded by the present condition of affairs. Rumors are flying about that Hayes has said he should approve the appropriation bills as passed by the Democrats. A stalwart, fresh from the White House, denied the report. The truth is they are shaking for fear that Hayes will desert the party. Evans and Schurz desire him to approve the bills, and the Republican party is afraid of the influence of those powerful personages.

It is stated that this gentleman will have the choice of the chairmanship, and that he will select that of Appropriations.

In his prayer Mr. Talmage thought of the result of his trial by the Presbytery, and invoked that no official authority shall interrupt us in our services. He took his text from the Bible—Revelation vi, 9-10. "I have seen an estimate made by no ingenious man, and Mr. Talmage, 'as to the number of people who can be found in heaven'—the number at least."
